ARTEMISIA
UNIVERSITY OF NEVADA
RENO

Where the Truckee snow fed waters drop from mountains' crest
And the meadows meet the sagebrush by the sun caressed
Cradled by the silver mountains 'neath the Western blue
Stands our noble Alma Mater, our Nevada U.

As the miner on the desert prospects every place,
So Nevada seeks the future with an upturned face.
Everywhere she gathers knowledge, all that's good and true
Gives she to her sons and daughters of Nevada U.

We will ever live to serve her, live to give our best,
Live to make our Alma Mater pride of all the West.
Let her praises wake the echoes, while we pledge anew
Hearts and minds and hands and voices to Nevada U.

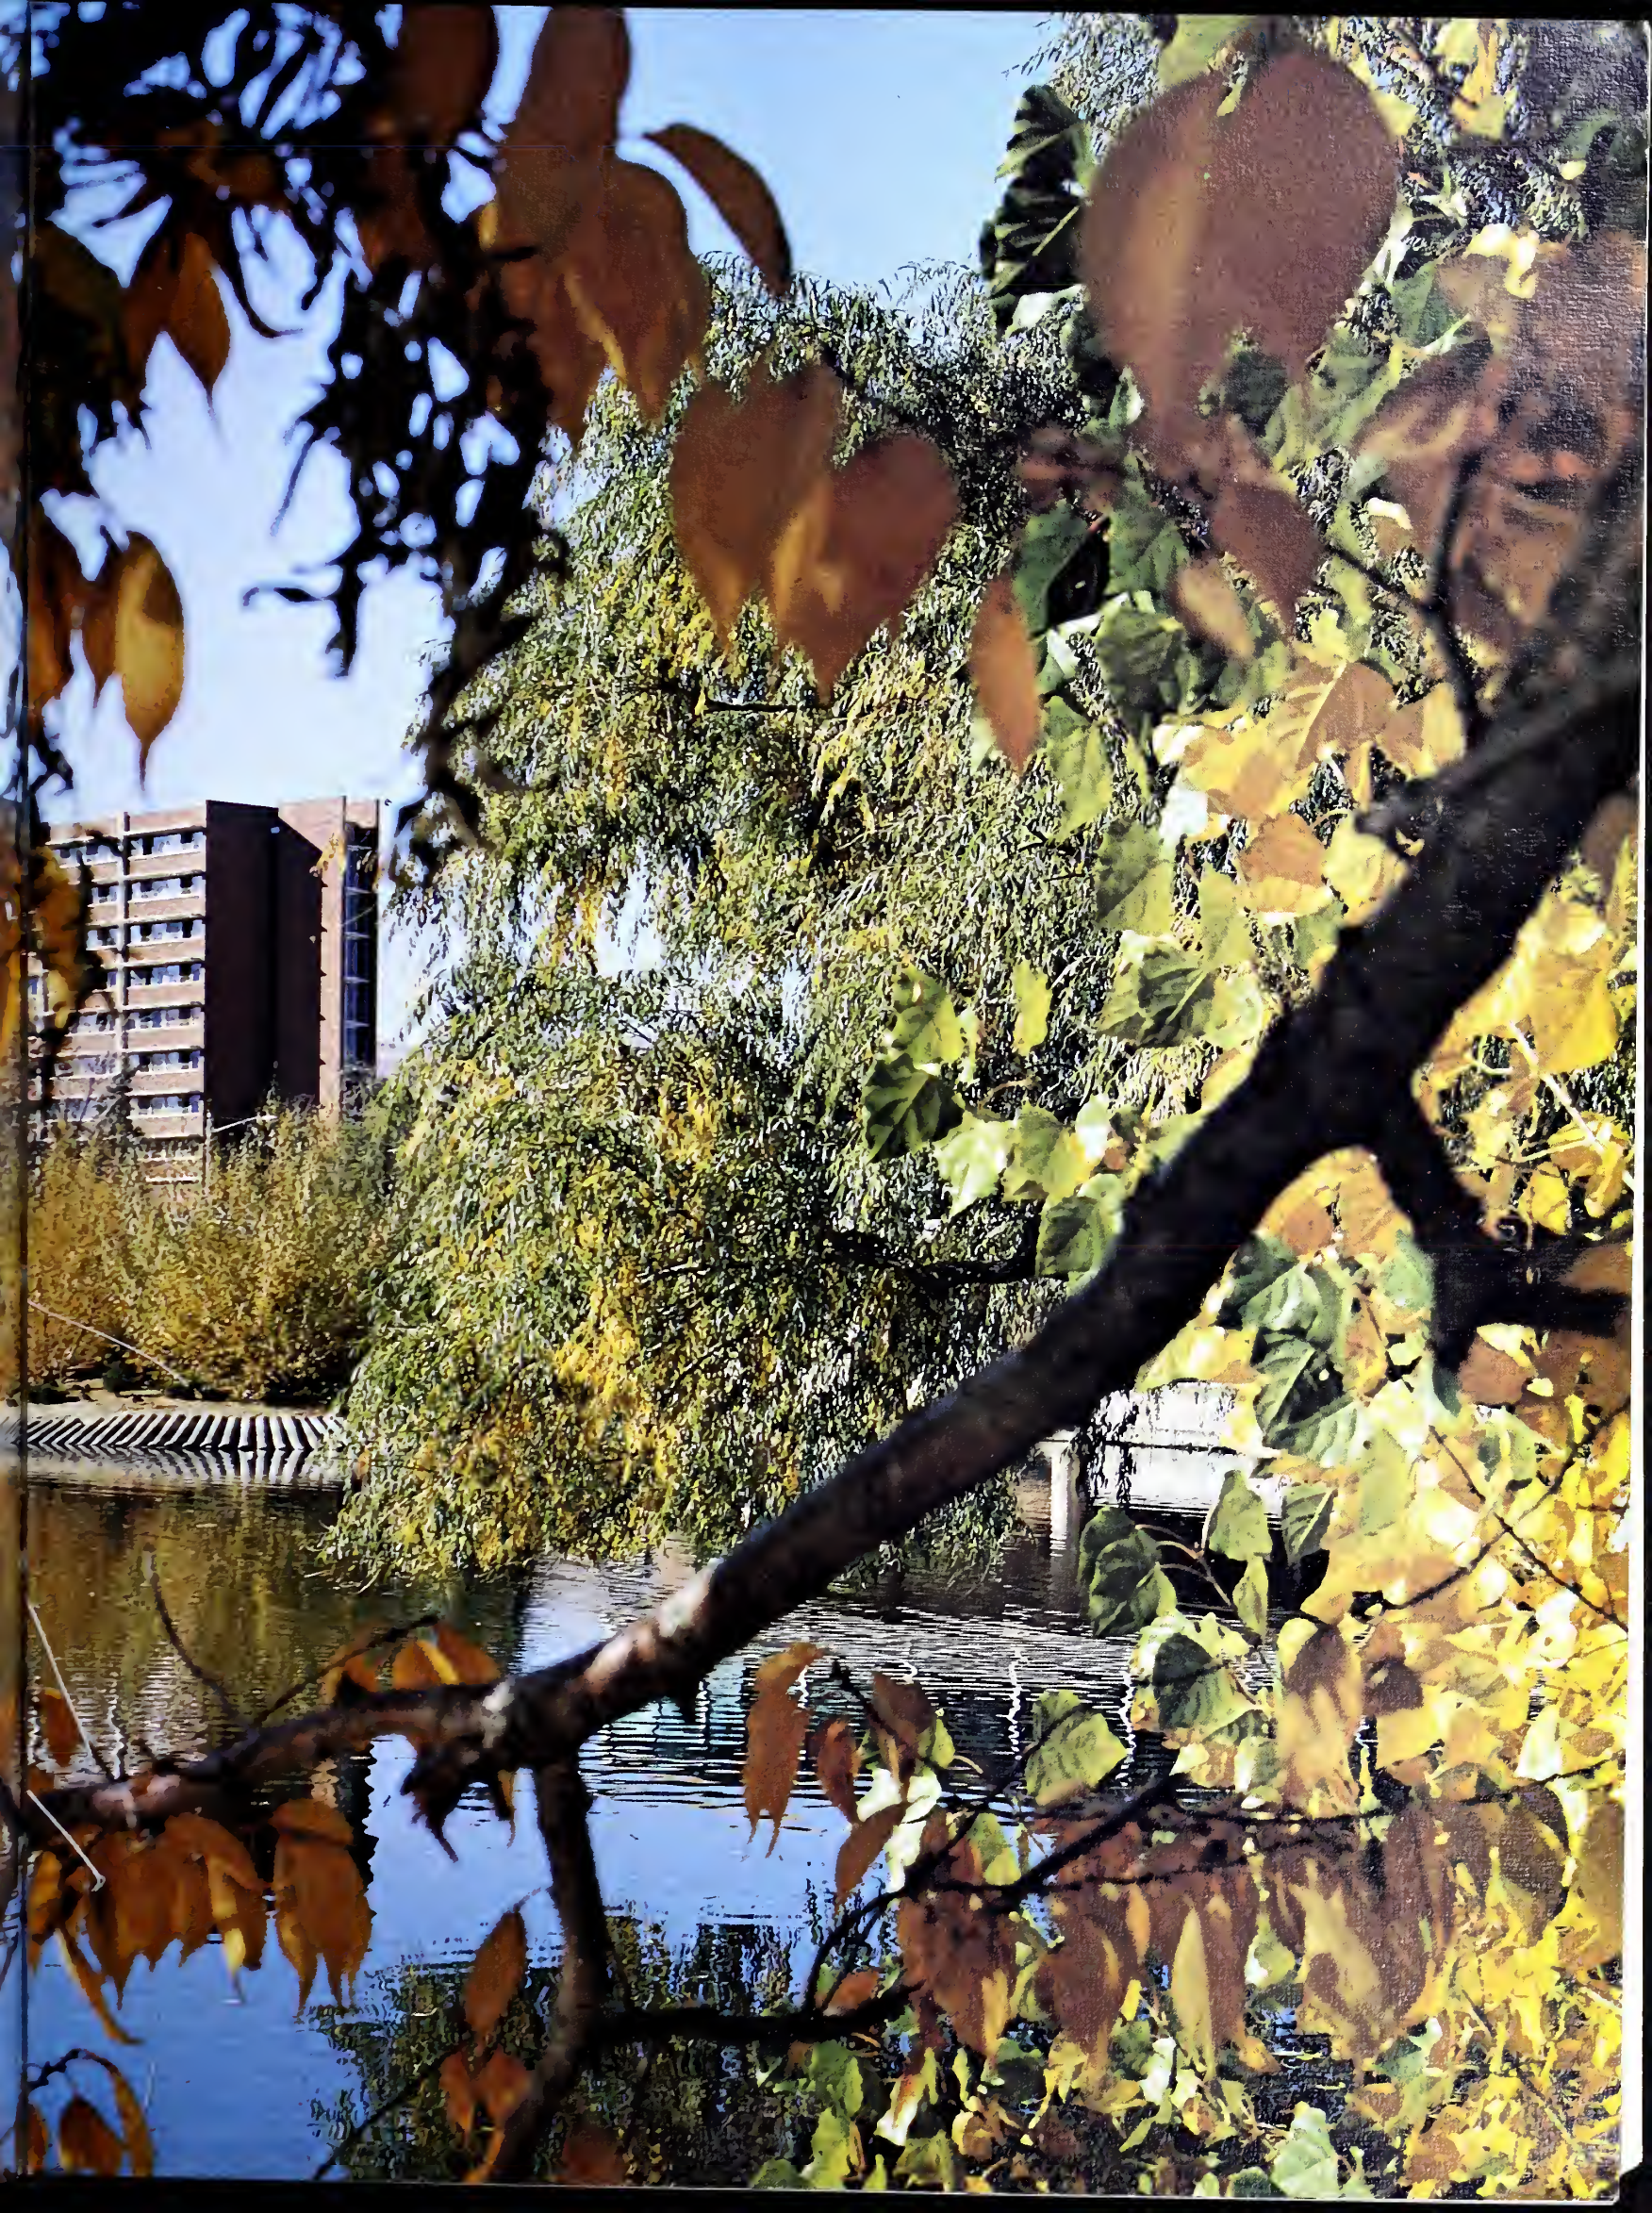

The University of Nevada campus is picturesque. There are old ivy-covered buildings and shaded brick walks along the quad. There are new buildings like the Student Union with its dining commons that projects over Manzanita Lake. It is a setting that has been used for on location shooting of motion pictures.

However, a beautiful setting doesn't constitute a university. The true university is made of its people. At the University of Nevada, these people are the greeks and independents who worked together to draft a new constitution. They are the faculty and the administration who listen to and act upon student demands.

They are the individuals who carry the Nevada pennant to the top of Mount McKinley. They are the university's benefactors, such as the descendants of John W. Mackay, who represent an atmosphere of giving which is essential to a true university. And they are those that have gone before, like Mackay whose statue is reproduced on the cover of this book. He built a life that continues to benefit others.

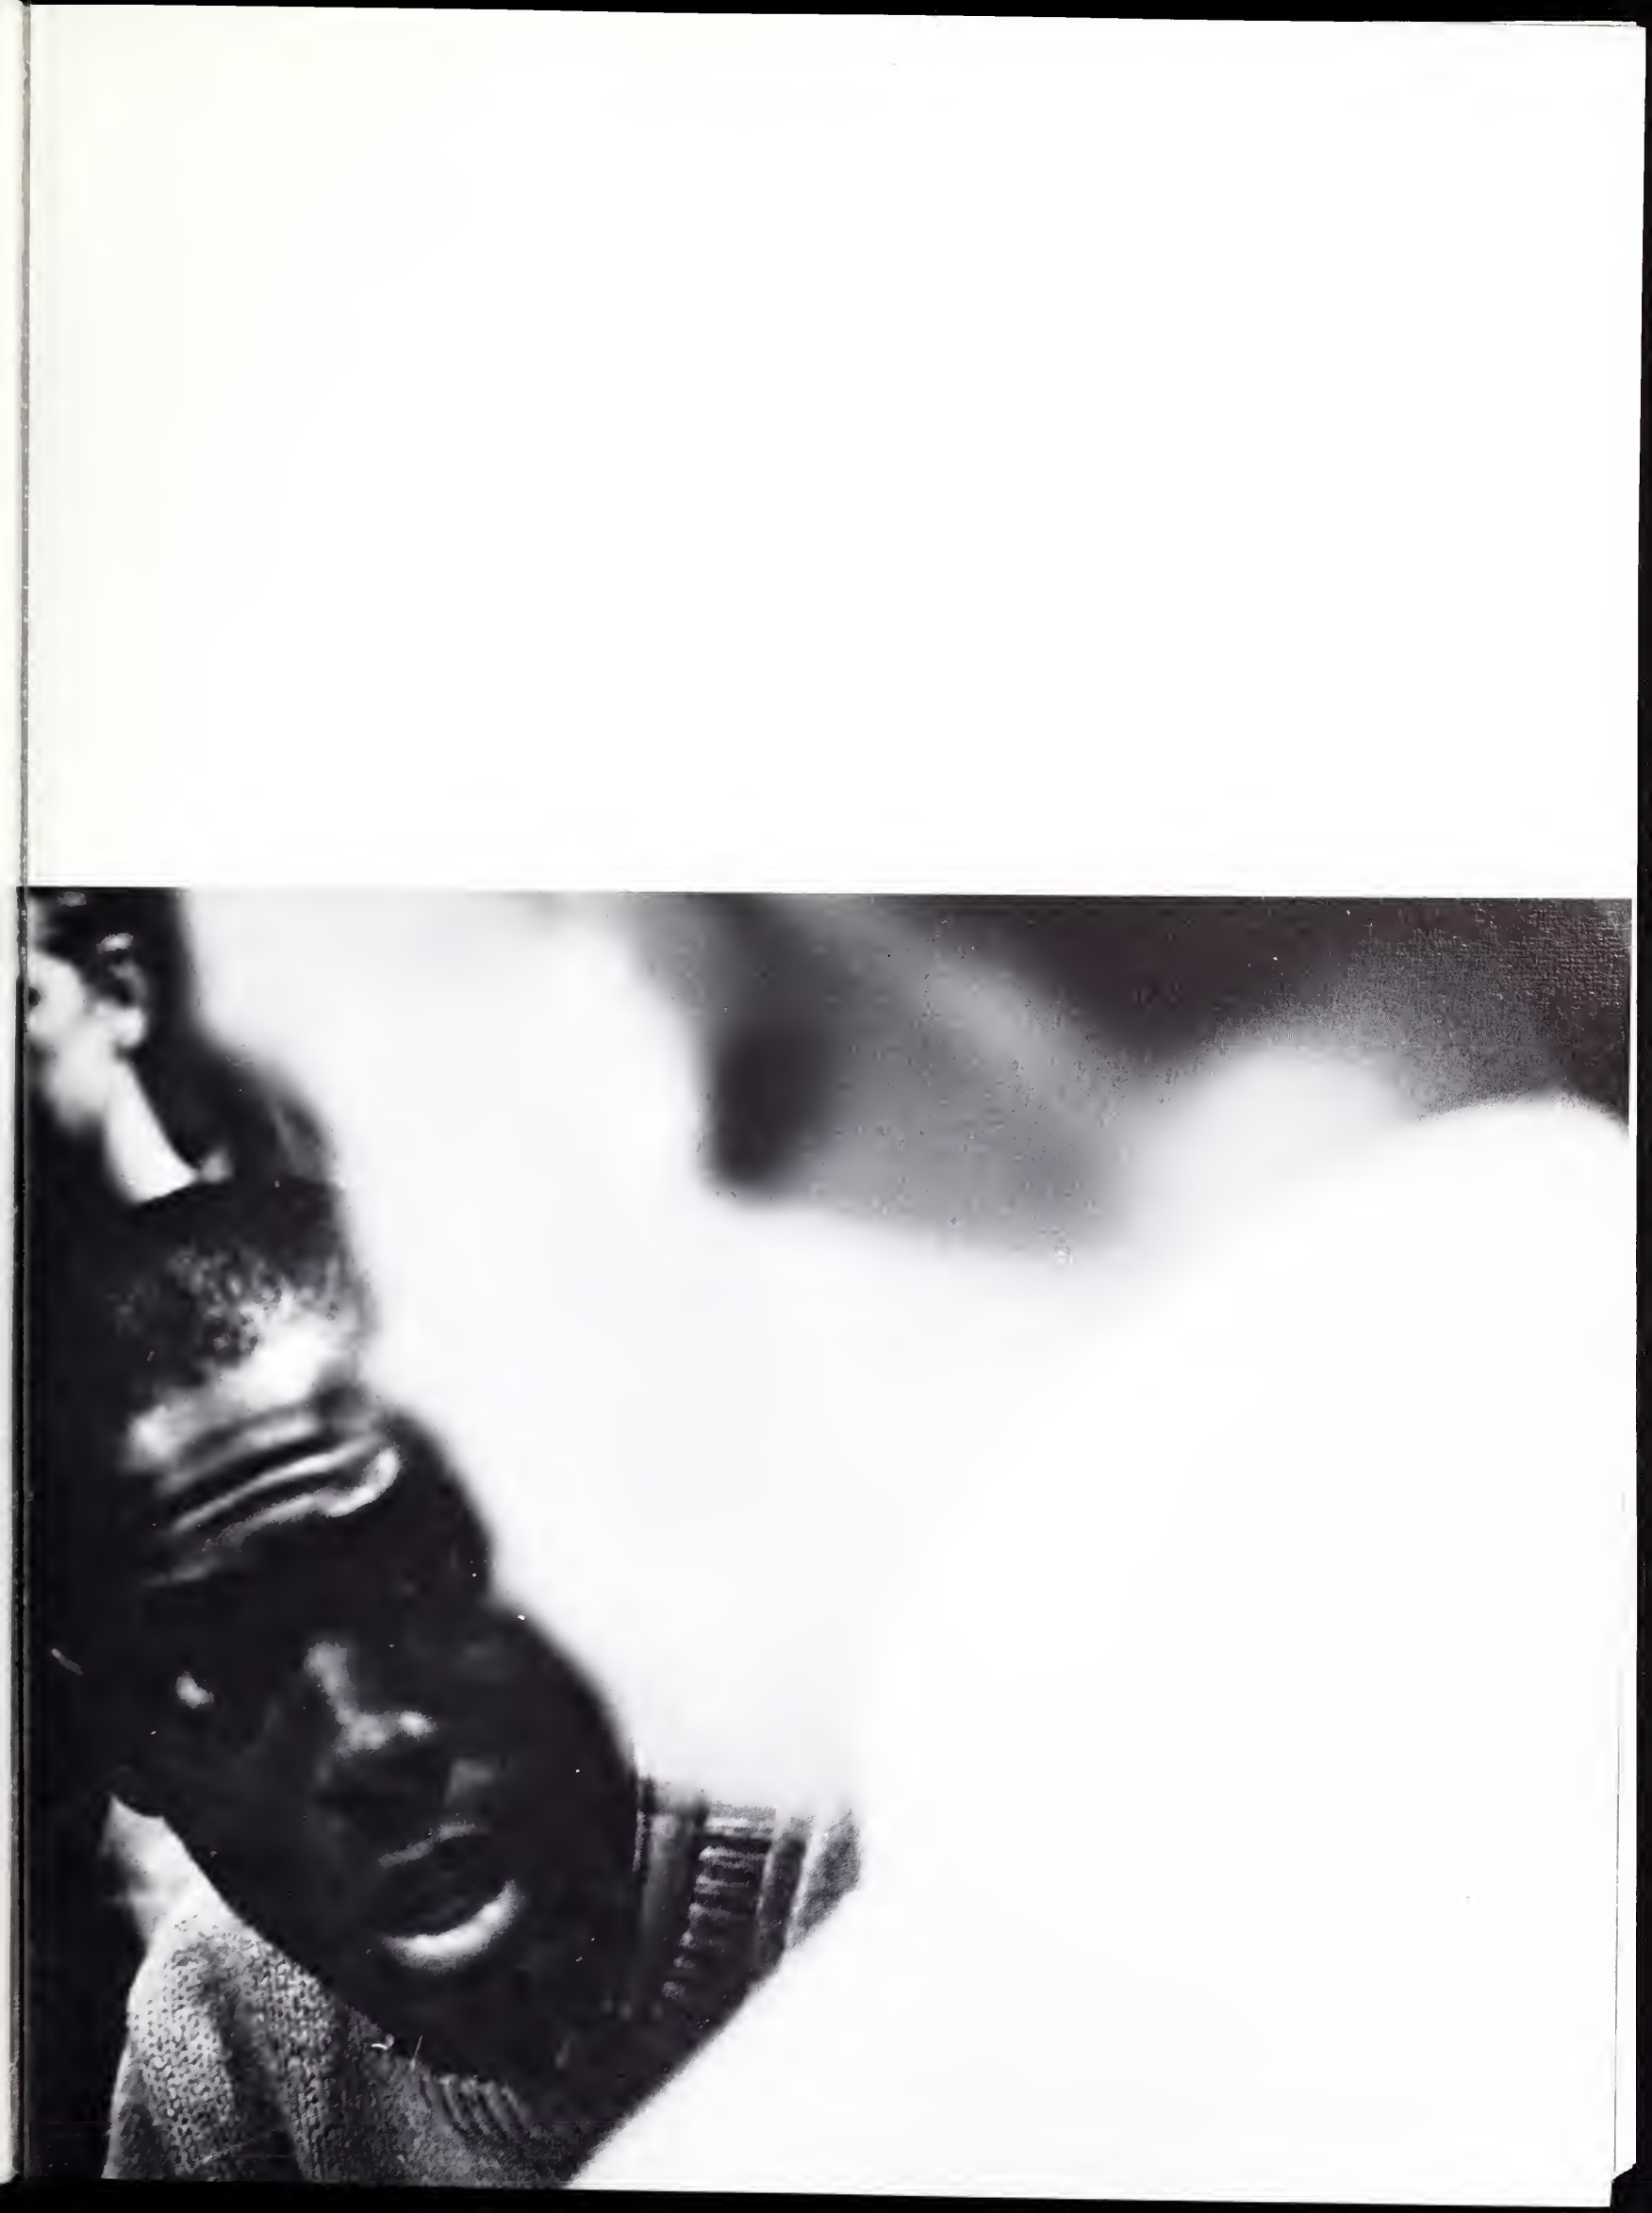

Because a true university is its people, it changes more rapidly than its setting. The 1969 Artemisia attempts to capture the people of the University of Nevada and their actions during this academic year.

Within these pages is the real University of Nevada 1968-69. Look closely--it will never be the same again.

Student Government

ASUN President Joe Bell

Joe Bell, the first Independent ASUN President elected since 1950, won on a "better communications ticket by a mere 24 votes of a record 1,812 votes cast. Bell worked closely with campus administration and student government. Student-faculty communication grew, starting with joint sessions of student and faculty senates. Student-administration communication began in earnest. President N. Edd Miller met with students. Dean of Students Sam Basta and student leaders were in continuous contact on all issues, meetings which had previously been closed were opened to the public.

Bell's casual manner typified the Nevada student of 1969. With campuses in turmoil across the nation, the U.N. campus seemed too conservative. We didn't need riots. Students like Joe Bell were making the changes but with less publicity.

During the first semester of the school year student leaders were plagued by an unexpected ASUN Senate problem--the difficulty of mustering a quorum at the Wednesday night meetings. As a result Senate President Dick Harris called for a "streamling" of the senate to remove "dead wood." Harris along with two other senators drafted a new ASUN Constitution.

The new constitution proposed three major changes: the merger of the ASUN with the Student Union Board, the reapportionment of the senate to provide a better "balance of power," and the creation of a Referral Board to replace the Office of Student Affairs in screening students up for disciplinary action.

"Capital For A Day"

The "Capital for a Day" program brought Governor Paul Laxalt and part of his cabinet to campus February 18.

Topics discussed in the open session were: civil rights, discrimination in housing and employment, lack of communication between students and faculty, and marijuana. A petition signed by about 300 students was presented to the governor calling for a lessening of penalties in cases involving marijuana. The governor said he favored this but he would veto any bill calling for light sentences for "pushers."

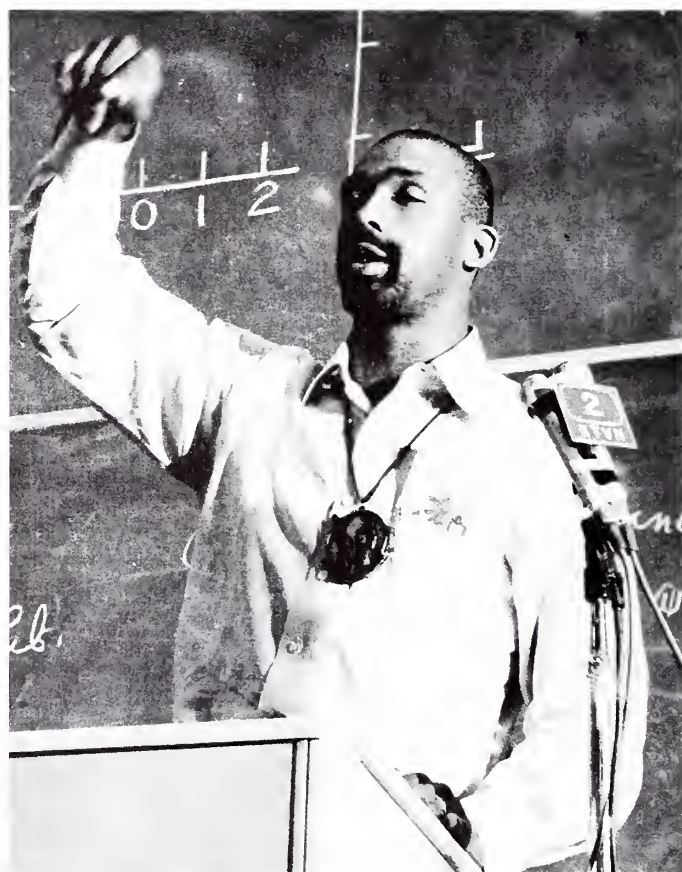

The University budget also came under attack, but Laxalt said education accounted for 65 per cent of the state's general fund spending; and the University of Nevada system was getting 18 per cent of the general fund.

University President N. Edd Miller made a concentrated effort this year to maintain the "open door" policy with students and faculty that he instituted when he assumed the position of president.

Miller met with students at several forums to discuss policies and problems including campus drinking, student-administration, and in-loco-parentis rules. During February,

Miller put into effect a new policy on searches in dormitory rooms after receiving a petition signed by 900 students and faculty.

At this time, he also stated "I do wish, . . . , to reaffirm my complete confidence in the reality of student government. I particularly believe in the right of students to discipline themselves."

Academic Deans

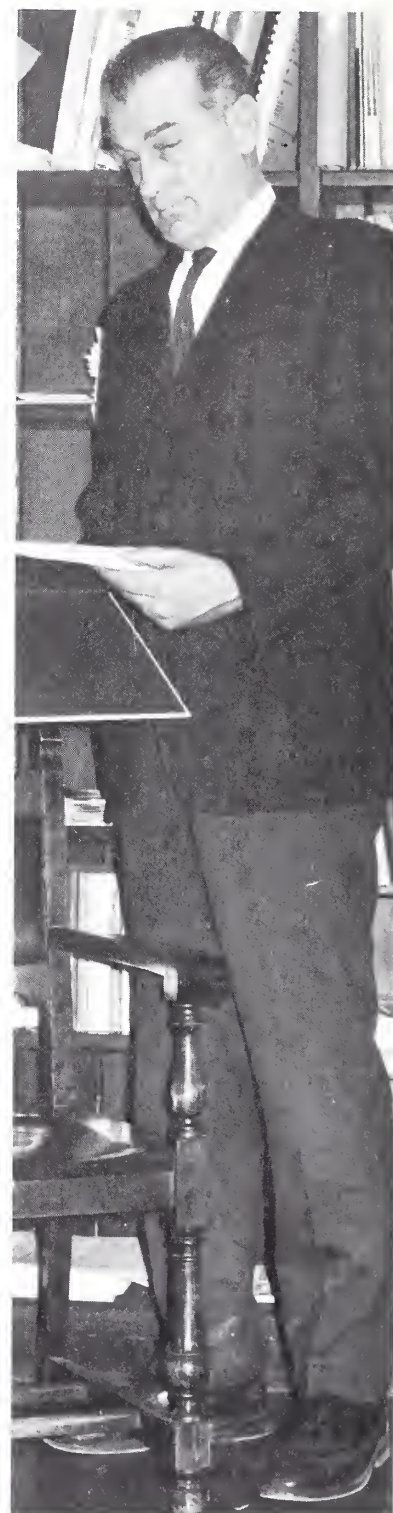

"We are tired of being hypocrites," said Dean of Student Affairs Sam Basta when he announced a proposed major policy change concerning student drinking. Basta's proposal was a result of student demands that the double standard of enforcement of campus liquor policies be eliminated. Basta said the current policy couldn't be strictly carried out because fraternity houses are on private property while dormitories are on state property.

Basta proposed "certain designated areas on university owned and controlled property shall be authorized permitting the storage, possession and use of alcoholic beverages. During the year other deans helped students implement more concrete policies. Dean of Women Roberta Barnes and Assistant Dean of Women Cecelia St. John worked closely with representatives of women's living groups to bring about open hours.

e University

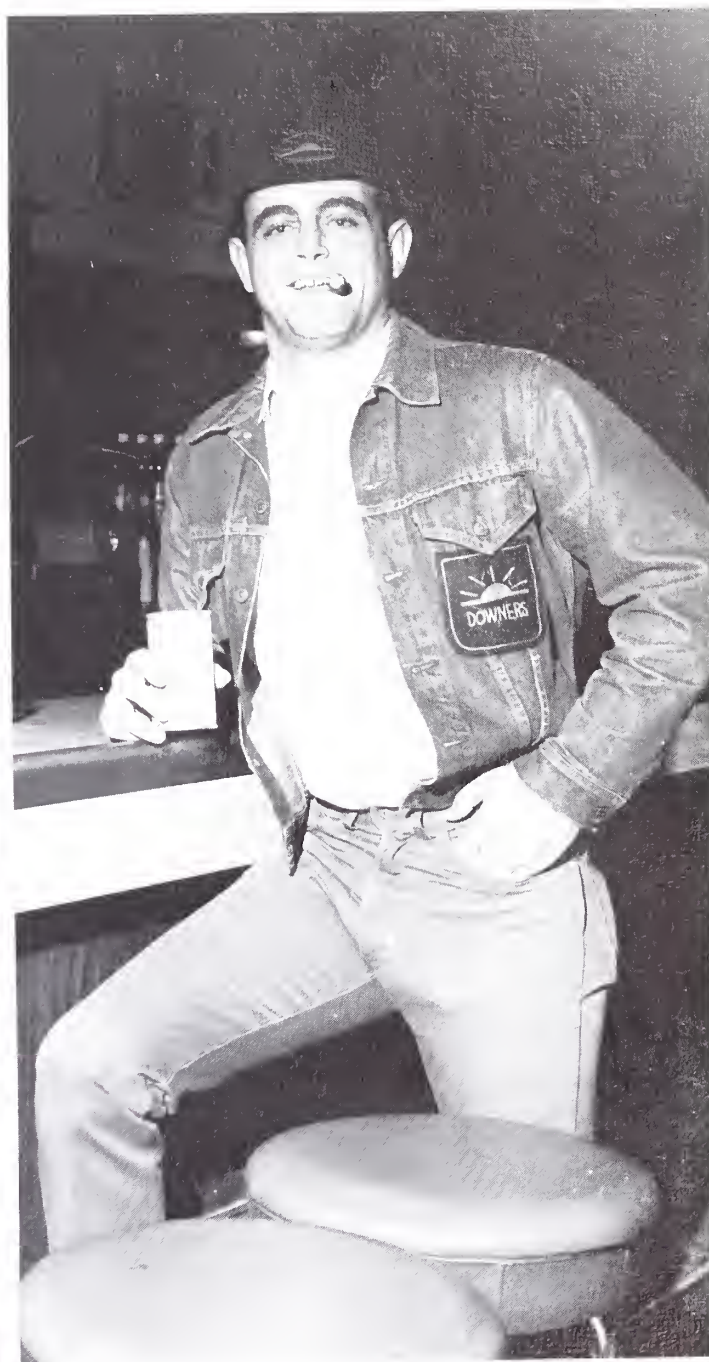

Under a plan devised by two University of Nevada Junior Students, NFU started its first quarter in the fall of 1968. About 200 students registered for the 23 courses that were offered. Courses ranged from mountaineering to Guerrilla Movements in the Modern World. Free University promoteer Bill Metzker says the free university concept is designed to "supplement the curriculum and try and promote changes in the community at large."
